USA Today Bestselling Author of
Curing the Blues with a New Pair of Shoes

It was a lighthearted readIt ended rather abruptly I will read another book by this author to see if they are all like this one. Darla Denman, a faded Nashville country singer is on a comeback tour with her ex husband manager, Bob, and his new child bride who is supposed to be her lead in singer While in their dilapidated van heading for a telethon performance, they find themselves stranded in Salt Lick, Texas, with no money Debbie Sue allows them to stay in her vacant rental home and Edwina allows them to use her husband Vic s vehicle while he is out of town But the show must go on When the two back up singers bail and accept a ride from a trucker heading back to Nashville, Darla asks Debbie Sue and Edwina to step in The women are excited about being in the show they only have to lip sync but their opportunity is lost when Roxie, the young wife, is found dead in her dressing room with a nail file in her throat Darla confesses to the murder because she thinks Bob did it This is a job for the Domestic Equalizers Along with their husbands, who learned after their past escapade in NYC that they can t be trusted out of town on their own, they hop a flight to Nashville to apprehend the real killer After the usual madcap mayhem they typically find themselves in, the truth that is revealed shocks even Edwina, who thought she had heard it all. I read the books in this series just because the titles are so fun and the interaction between the two main characters, Debbie Sue and Edwina, makes me laugh Some of the lines are laugh out loud funny. Quick, funny summer read
