These are great books to read when I find myself in a reading lull and don't know what I want to read next. Always entertaining, easy to read cozy mysteries that aren't obvious by the second or third chapter. The antics of Whitherspoon's household are a delight. I highly recommend this book and the series as well. Another solid Mrs Jeffries read. These books perfectly embody the cozy mystery and I unashamedly admit to enjoying them. Anyone who likes a good cozy should check them out. I do enjoy this Victorian cozy mystery series, and look forward to each new book that comes out. This was a respectable showing, but I did find that the book was not as well plotted as most of the others in this series. A young, modern woman is poisoned at her own dinner party. There is no shortage of suspects in this fairly complex case. The characters are realistic, and I do love the people that live in Upper Edmonton Gardens. The mystery was a good one, and there were lots of red herrings to distract the reader. Will Mrs Jeffries and her intrepid crew be able to solve it in time? I look forward to the next book in this long running series. Always enjoy the Inspector and Mrs Jeffries series and the latest book didn't disappoint. Mrs Jeffries Forges Ahead finds Mrs Jeffries and the rest of the gang doing what they do best. A proper mystery with plenty of clues. It was the perfect read for the few hours I was stuck on an airplane.

EMILY BRIGHTWELL

young woman from an artistic family who recently married into a wealthy one is poisoned at the family's ball in front of a crowd of people. Lots of people didn't like her, but who wanted her dead. As usual, Mrs. Jeffries and the rest of the staff and friends of Inspector Witherspoon come together to solve the crime. We have a new member of our sleuthing team who offers a unique talent to the enterprise. These books are fun little romps designed to entertain without too much effort.

28 in the end of the 19th century London based mystery series in which Scotland Yard Inspector Witherspoon's domestic staff headed by Mrs. Jeffries, without his knowledge, work to help him solve his murder cases. Arlette Montrose Banfield was killed with poison at a dinner party in front of hundreds of guests. There are plenty of suspects for Witherspoon and Constable Barnes to deal with. The story alternates between showing readers Witherspoon and his associate Barnes in action questioning suspects and his household staff investigating the case.
