A NOVEL

good story about two friends from the opposite coasts who are going to grad school somewhere in the middle and how they try to fit in there while holding on to where they came from. Ronnie e Doris sono due donne che frequentano un corso di specializzazione all'Università di Langsdale, una cittadina dell'Indiana molto diversa da quelle lasciate sulla costa occidentale. Lo stato in cui si ritrovano a vivere viene descritto come repubblicano e razzista ancora attuale, infatti, l'orrore del Ku Klux Klan. Le cose, quindi, non sono molto facili soprattutto per Ronnie, che è di colore e per questo si vede rifiutare un lavoro estivo come insegnante all'Università. Ma anche per Doris, che è bianca, le cose non vanno proprio come aveva sognato il mondo accademico snob e traboccante di squali, e inoltre la sua vita sentimentale allo stallo. Entrambe, inoltre, devono fare i conti con gli anni che passano e con amici e familiari che le considerano delle perdenti nonch delle perditempo a causa del loro perenne status da universitarie. Vite in bianco e nero un libro che, se si riescono a superare le prime pagine, in cui le autrici usano parolacce e continui riferimenti sessuali per accattivarsi il lettore, si rivela molto piacevole, ironico, divertente, capace di toccare temi quali il razzismo, le ingiustizie, i sogni infranti, le scelte davanti alle quali ci pone la vita. <http://iltesorodicarta.blogspot.it> The book over all was ok The characters were mediocre and nothing really stood out The description of the mid west where the girls went to college however was fabulous Dead on. the author tended to be a little wordy and I found myself having to re read the some sentences to figure out what was being said Good beach read, when you have time to read carefully and set it down to do other things. Academic chick lit about a couple of grad students in an English department at an un named Indiana University Some amusing send ups of pretentiousness and departmental politics Some musings on class and race, especially taking what the main characters are reading and their trying to interpret it to their non academic lives.
